WRITERS' CORNER

Theme: Of Roots and Wings

Rising out from moistened soil,
Beneath which roots are held in toil-
Nourishing with doses of love and care,
Protected gently, like something rare.

Those scents that bloomed all around,
Danced with the laughter, full and loud.
An untroubled mind- calm and still,
Sheltered beneath a peaceful sky.

Unaware of what she's about to face-
A thunderstorm or a lightning race.
Yet rising up like a winged bird
To fly so high and to be heard.

Those fragile wings grew sure and strong,
Lifting her where she's always belonged.
With roots that whisper, "You are enough,"
And wings that answer, "Even when it's tough."

In cosmic shadows, a heart once fell
Roots of duty bound it to a painful spell
Wings of rebellion whispered sweet escape
From chains of loyalty that love could not shape
Memories of a girl with starry eyes
Haunt the emptiness of lonely skies
Roots of past love still cling to his soul
Yet wings of longing yearn to make her whole
In the darkness, he searches for his way
Through the wreckage of a heart that loved in vain
Roots of who he was slowly start to fade
As wings of hope beat stronger – for a love delayed
His path forever scarred by inner strife
A warrior's heart still bearing the weight of life
Roots of honor once guided his every deed
Now wings of freedom beckon him to proceed
Through the silence, her voice still echoes near
A haunting melody that calms his deepest fear
Roots of love remain, a glimmer of what's true
Wings of devotion whisper – "I'll wait for you."

B.A. English

I am someone made of roots and wings,
Of tender earth and open skies,
My roots hold stories, whispered things,
Ancestors' history and mother's love.

They hold me close through storm and calm,
Through endless days that test what's true,
Their strength is silent, warm and kind,
A tender thread that makes me whole.

But my heart still aches to wander,
To chase the winds beyond the sky,
With broken wings of hope and light,
I dance with stars and whisper to the night.

So let me grow where roots are strong,
And let me roam where dreams call me,
For life is both to stay and to leave,
To love the earth, yet kiss the sky
